Though we have drifted apart
In distance,
I always think of you as Being right here . . .
Though we have different interests,
Our experiences are still the same,
And,
Though we have new friends,
It is our old continuous friendship
That means the most to me . . .

Dedication

All our thoughts,
Once comfortably niched in the Predictable present of Ipswich High School, Must now change,

contort.

stretch themselves up and away

to stray,

search

stumble,

soar,

converge and disperse—then

To abide illuminant

In our families,

careers,

diversions.

Of the inconstant Future.

It is to this upward striving,
This arduous and private journey,
That we dedicate our yearbook.

Desiderata

Go placidly amid the noise and the haste, and remember what peace there may be in silence. As far as possible, without surrender, be on good terms with all persons. Speak your truth quietly and clearly; and listen to others, even to the dull and the ignorant; they too have their story. Avoid loud and aggressive persons; they are vexatious to the spirit. If you compare yourself with others, you may become vain or bitter, for always there will be greater and lesser persons than yourself. Enjoy your achievements as well as your plans. Keep interested in your own career, however humble; it is a real possession in the changing fortunes of time. Exercise caution in your business affairs, for the world is full of trickery. But let this not blind you to what virtue there is; many persons strive for high ideals, and everywhere life is full of heroism. Be careful. Especially do not feign affection. Neither be cynical about love; for in the face of all aridity and disenchantment, it is as perennial as the grass. Take kindly the counsel of the years, gracefully surrendering the things of youth. Nurture strength of spirit to shield you in sudden misfortune. But do not distress yourself with dark imaginings. Many fears are born of fatigue and loneliness. Beyond a wholesome discipline, be gentle with yourself. You are a child of the universe no less than the trees and the stars; you have a right to be here. And whether or not it is clear to you, no doubt the universe is unfolding as it should. Therefore be at peace with God, whatever you conceive Him to be. And whatever your labors and aspirations, in the noisy confusion of life, keep peace in your soul. With all its sham, drudgery and broken dreams, it is still a beautiful world. Be cheerful. Strive to be happy.

A black and white photograph of a rowing team in a boat on a body of water. In the foreground, a large, dark silhouette of a person is visible, looking out towards the water. The rowing team consists of several people in a small boat, with one person holding a long oar. The background shows a calm body of water and a distant shoreline with some trees and structures.

In Memory of Laurien Levesque

We all lost a friend during the course of this, our senior year. He was taken away from us in a tragic car accident. Death is so final; the shock is so terrible. The memories, at least, live on.

Most people remember Larry as always smiling, a young man with a carefree air. We remember him in his Styx tee shirt telling his enjoyable stories concerning the concerts he frequently attended. Larry was a good story-teller, and his stories live on even though the story-teller has gone.

PROJECT OPEN IS A MIND-OPENER

Do open classrooms open minds?

The debate on that question isn't over yet, but if the early success of an Ipswich learning experiment is any indication, the answer probably will be "yes".

Project Open, an alternative program for unmotivated eleventh graders, has been underway for over a year, and students and teachers are enthusiastic about their progress.

Housed in an isolated building on the grounds of Notre Dame Novitiate, Project Open students gather in two long rooms that resemble a workshop more than a classroom. The school is adequately furnished with comfortable seating for reading and facilities for a small engine shop. Students have yet to leave their marks on the walls with posted announcements and decorations, although schedules indicating who is doing what when are clearly visible, and a recent spread from the Boston Globe outlining career opportunities papers one wall.

The students have many opportunities and often set up independent studies with a teacher of that particular subject. The student, though, must fill out a weekly schedule noting the amount of time spent daily on each course. Using the schedules, the directors can then insure that hourly credit requirements are being met. The teachers then fill out a weekly report on each student that notes conduct and ways in which the student's behavior or work has been unsatisfactory. Parents, teachers, and students have access to these reports at any time. The project seems to have proven effective.

The Man of Real Excellence

The man whose sole pursuit is Profit-and-Advantage can be ruined by a bad harvest, but the man whose sole pursuit is Excellence cannot be confused by evil times.

The man of real excellence improves other people in five ways. Some he transforms like rain in season; for others he perfects an excellence that already exists; for others he brings success to innate capacity; for others he provides answers to questions; and others derive benefit in their own way. These are the five ways in which the man of real excellence improves other people.

To act without knowing why; to do things as they have always been done, without asking why; to engage in an activity all one's life without really understanding what it's about and how it relates to other things—this is to be one of the crowd.
